

Medal. World War II Victory Medal

27 BU-Sam, MAES Flight Nurses Class 45H June 1945.

Certificate of Graduation AAF School of Aviation Medicine - July 28, 1945. No. 222

Ft Dix AAF - New Jersey 1945

Flew out of Mitchell AAF New York

Did Air Evac in States. In Sept. 1945 stationed at Orly Field, Paris. Flew in C47 - C54 doing Transcontinental Air Evac., stopping in Azores and Newfoundland and then to N.Y.

1945 - 1946 - 806th MAES SQ.

that the President decided to open up a Flight School to train Flight Nurses. In time Bowman Field became too small and Randolph Field in San Antonio, Texas became the major Flight school. We were the largest class ever to graduate from Randolph Field and I believe it is also so to this day. I graduated in 1945.

#830

Cecile A. Santarelli

May 21-12

Many years ago, this article appeared in a magazine and included this information about the first Flight Nurse and how Flight Nurses could be utilized during World War II. And how the first school, which was then Bowman Field in Kentucky was established. According to the then President of the USA.

A young nurse in the Pacific, volunteered to care for a wounded Soldier, severely hurt to be flown transatlantic to the States. She had never been in a airplane and had no training as a Flight Nurse. She did such a wonderful job and arrived safely with her wounded Soldier. It was then over 7